Statism goes to Court

by Andrew C. McCarthy, 31 March 2012

... Is it not equally offensive for government to coerce private hospitals to treat patients for free? For government to coerce private insurers regarding whom they must cover and what they must cover them for? To dictate that, in making these determinations and calculating their risks, insurers must ignore palpably pertinent information? In the law, a contract is a voluntary bargain. What we've tolerated for a very long time, however, are adhesive arrangements of involuntary servitude. The law's usual word for that is extortion...

A supreme shock for 'La-La' libs

by John Podhoretz, 29 March 2012

The panicked reception in the mainstream media of the three-day Supreme Court health-care marathon is a delightful reminder of the nearly impenetrable parochialism of American liberals.

They're so convinced of their own correctness — and so determined to believe conservatives are either a) corrupt, b) stupid or c) deluded — that they find themselves repeatedly astonished to discover conservatives are in fact capable of a) advancing and defending their own powerful arguments, b) effectively countering weak liberal arguments and c) exposing the soft underbelly of liberal self-satisfaction as they do so...

Don John sez...

Help Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker beat back the Obamunist thugs of the public-sector unions. For many decades, all across America, these brigands have contributed huge amounts of money to the Democrats, who return the favor by voting lavish pay and benefits to the public sector unions—paid for by ever-higher state taxes levied on millions of ordinary taxpayers who do not belong to government unions. This whole corrupt merry-go-round has brought states like California, Illinois, and New Jersey to the brink of bankruptcy. After Gov. Walker took steps to keep this from happening to Wisconsin, the unions gathered enough petition signatures (some signed by Mickey Mouse and Bugs Bunny) to force a recall election which could replace him with an Obamunist Democrat. Responsible citizens everywhere have a stake in this contest. There's a wealth of additional information at Governor Walker's website; and please help him with a contribution by clicking here.

Once upon a time, even liberal Democrats recognized that public-sector unions tend to cause corruption by their very existence: "All government employees should realize that the process of collective bargaining, as usually understood, cannot be transplanted into the public service. It has its distinct and insurmountable limitations when applied to public-personnel management. The very nature and purposes of government make it impossible for administrative officials to represent fully or to bind the employer in mutual discussions with government-employee organizations. The employer is the whole people." —Franklin Delano Roosevelt, 1937

What if Trayvon had been white, and the shooter black?

by Michael Filozof, 24 March 2012

...In fact, such an event occurred in 2009 in Greece, N.Y., a suburb of Rochester. Roderick Scott, a black man, shot and killed an unarmed white teen, Christopher Cervini, whom he believed was burglarizing a neighbor's car, with a licensed .40 cal. handgun...

ObamaCare's contract problem

by George F. Will, 23 March 2012

...Hitherto, most attention has been given to whether Congress, under its constitutional power to regulate interstate commerce, may coerce individuals into engaging in commerce by buying health insurance. Now the Institute for Justice (IJ), a libertarian public interest law firm, has focused on this fact: The individual mandate is incompatible with centuries of contract law. This is so because a compulsory contract is an oxymoron...

The inexorable march of creative destruction

by George F. Will, 21 March 2012

...Theodore Roosevelt, America's first progressive president, thought it was government's duty to "look ahead and plan out the right kind of civilization." TR looked ahead and saw a "timber famine" caused by railroads' ravenous appetites for crossties that rotted. He did not foresee creosote, which preserves crossties. Imagine all the things government planners cannot anticipate when, in their defining hubris, they try to impose their static dream of the "right kind" of future...

Austerity or Stimulus? What we need is growth

by John H. Cochrane, 22 March 2012

... “Structural reform” is vital to restore growth now, not a vague idea for many years in the future when the stimulus has worked its magic. It’s also a lot harder politically than the breezy language suggests. “Reform” isn’t just “policy” handed down by technocrats like rules on the provenance of prosciutto; it involves taking away subsidies and interventions that entrenched interests have grown to love, and have supported politicians to protect. They will fight it tooth and nail....

Troubling things Obama's Spring Break story reveal

Investors Business Daily, 22 March 2012

... There's also the double standard at play here. Obama routinely thrusts his daughters into the limelight whenever it suits his own political interests, as he's doing in his campaign ads, and as he did when he invoked their names to justify bashing Rush Limbaugh. Obama can't have it both ways. Either his daughters are off-limits, or they aren't.

Then of course there's the blatant media bias at work. Reporters show far less deference to the children of prominent Republican politicians. Just ask the Bush twins or any of Sarah Palin's kids. In the end, this was more about an Obama power play over the media than it was about his daughter's safety...

NBC News 'punk faggot' scandal erupts

by Jeffrey Lord, 16 March 2012

..Conservatives, as the late Andrew Breitbart memorably noted in his last CPAC speech, are a different breed than they were in the day when Ronald Reagan's General Electric Theater was forced off the air by the Left in 1962—because then-actor Reagan had been critical of the Kennedy administration. Said Breitbart: "Conservatives used to take it and we're not taking it anymore."...

Obama's oily desperation redux

by Ross Kaminsky, 16 March 2012

...As usual for the political party that believes that people do not react to economic incentives, Democrats misunderstand capital markets. Speculators will not be deterred by any short-term policy, such as tapping the SPR, that does not change the fundamental long-term supply and demand calculus...Obama himself, as well as Energy Secretary Steven "I don't own a car" Chu, are on record supporting high energy prices as part of their cultish devotion to "renewable," which is to say inefficient, energy sources...According to energy author Robert Bryce, the amount of energy that would be delivered by the Keystone XL pipeline that Barack Obama just refused (for a second time) to approve would exceed the energy produced by every wind turbine and every solar panel in the U.S., combined. The nation knows who these men really are and what they really believe, which is why President Obama's recent squirming on energy, now that high prices are harming him politically, is not working with the public...

Obama flubs U.S. history—again

by Carl M. Cannon, 16 March 2012

...He attended some of this country's finest schools, but as he demonstrated anew on Thursday, Barack Obama shares with his fellow Americans one of their most dubious national traits: a nonchalant disregard for historical accuracy. In an age when Twitter and other social media can propagate with distressing efficiency the fake Lincoln quote, the false Twain quip, the invented Ben Franklin advice, Obama is a president for our times.

Speaking yesterday about energy, the president found it necessary to casually slander Rutherford B. Hayes...

Republicans: Black America's True Friends

by Lloyd Marcus, 16 March 2012

...My frustration comes from the knowledge that those claiming to have black America's empowerment and best interest at heart are the "elephant in the room" problem. They lie to black America. Who are "they"? They are Democrats committed to keeping blacks viewing themselves as victims. They are racist, bitter black politicians with huge chips on their shoulders, seeking eternal "payback" for America's original sin of slavery. ## Bell, via Kagan, on Critical Race Theory: the Constitution is the problem

by Joel B. Pollak, 11 March 2012

In November 1985, the Harvard Law Review published an article by Derrick Bell that was a "classic" in the development of Critical Race Theory. The article was edited by then-student Elena Kagan, and was cited by Prof. Charles Ogletree in support of her nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court by President Barack Obama in 2010. The article makes clear that Critical Race Theory sees the U.S. Constitution as a form of "original sin"—a view later embraced by Obama as a state legislator, and reflected in his actions and appointments. The following is an excerpt...

Big Oil and tax breaks

by Randall Hoven, 8 March 2012

...To hear the president and Democrats talk, you'd think that Big Oil was sucking the Treasury dry with huge subsidies. Almost a year ago I wrote about the federal government's "subsidies" to Big Oil. I said then, "They are all tax 'breaks'—about $4.3 billion per year—about 0.2% of this year's deficit and enough to fund about 10 hours of current US government spending." I was wrong. The tax breaks for all fossil fuels was not $4.3B in 2011. It was only $2.5B—about 0.19% of that year's deficit, and enough to fund only six hours of U.S. government spending. The source for such heresy? The Congressional Budget Office...

The Not-So-Bitter Pill

by Charles C. W. Cooke 8 March 2012

The question of who controls health-care costs has been endlessly discussed, but it seems that we've all missed the answer: the media. In recent weeks, we have watched the cost of birth-control pills rise dramatically: Three weeks ago, in the infancy of the Sandra Fluke fracas, we were told that the annual cost was, at most, $600; then Fluke upped the ante, reporting $1,000 per year in her congressional testimony; and finally, her figure was widely misreported as being $3,000 per annum. This last spike seems to have been the messy byproduct of Fluke's claim that $3,000 would be the cost over her three-year stay at Georgetown Law.

Fluke's figure seems to have been plucked from thin air. Planned Parenthood estimates the monthly cost at between $15 and $50, which translates to $160 to $600 per year...

Space Traders was produced by HBO films and is based on a short story written by Prof. Derrick Bell, Barack Obama's Harvard Law professor. Bell eventually resigned from Harvard in 1992, and continued to stir controversy. He wrote a short story, "The Space Traders," in which he imagined that Americans would sell blacks to aliens in exchange for gold to repay the national debt. He also implied that Jews would help blacks only out of a sense of self-preservation, turning Holocaust victim and diarist Anne Frank into "the symbol of Jewish hypocrisy."

by Steven Gutowski, 6 March 2012

Sandra Fluke is being sold by the left as something she's not. by Michael Tanner, 28 Feb 2012

...Despite constant predictions by the media and the law's supporters, Obamacare is not becoming more popular. The public seems to understand that government intervention does not generally make things less expensive. And there are good reasons for the public's skepticism. For example, the Congressional Budget Office reported in December that at least six programs that were supposed to save money under Obamacare not only don't, but some actually are increasing costs. And Jonathan Gruber, one of the architects of both Obamacare and its precursor Romneycare, now says that premiums are likely to rise under the new health-care law...

...The Rumsfeld strategy that toppled the Taliban over a decade ago was brilliant and innovative: special forces on horseback using GPS to call in unmanned drones. They will analyze it in staff colleges around the world for decades. But what we ought to be analyzing instead is the sad, aimless, bloated, arthritic, transnationalized folly of what followed. The United States is an historical anomaly: the nonimperial superpower. Colonialism is not in its DNA, and in some ways that speaks well for it, and in other ways, in a hostile and fast-changing world of predators and opportunists, it does not...

Our debt, not our children's

by Deroy Murdock, 2 March 2012

... "We have a treaty that says if China attacks Taiwan, we're supposed to defend Taiwan," Erskine Bowles, President Clinton's former chief of staff, observed. "But to do that we'd first have to borrow the money from China." ...

... Debt-weary Americans who worry about "the children" should start fretting about Washington's infantile Democrats.

Infanticide on Demand

by Fay Voshell, 1 March 2012

...Due to the influence of Christianity, infanticide was almost completely erased from the West. Parents' absolute right to do what they wished with their newborn children was bounded by the law, even though the practice would continue sporadically outside the law. Direct advocacy for and promulgation of infanticide virtually died out, with the notable exception of dictatorial regimes such as the Third Reich.

Until now. Recently, advocates for the parental right to kill unwanted newborns have appeared in the forms of Drs. Alberto Giubilini and Francesca Minerva, whose paper for the Australian Journal of Medical Ethics advocates "after birth abortion."...

Goodbye, Andrew by Michael Walsh, 1 March 2012

In the war against the institutional Left, Andrew Breitbart was the Right's Achilles; the bravest of all the warriors, now fallen on the plain. There was no combat in which he would not engage, no battle — however small — he would not join with glee, and no outcome acceptable except total victory. His unexpected death last night at the young age of 43 is not the end of his crusade, but its beginning...

Socialism without guns

by Larrey Anderson, 1 March 2012

As their economic orgy fades to its inevitable end, the people of Greece find themselves in a country that resembles more of a debtor's prison than a representative democracy. The Greeks have sold their freedom for a mess of pottage. If the United States is not careful, we could soon find ourselves in a very similar situation.

Unlike the former Soviet Union, there was no violent Marxist "revolution" in Greece. Freedom was taken from the country's citizens without a single shot being fired. The Greeks squandered their freedom by electing, time and again, politicians who promised an unsustainable socialist utopia. The Greeks committed political suicide by creating socialism without guns...
