The Unaffordable Care Act

by Yuval Levin, 27 March 2013

As ObamaCare begins to roll out, its champions are beginning to have to confront reality. But because they're getting a lot of leeway and protection from the political press, the results of this confrontation with the consequences of the law's poor design and misguided economic assumptions often take the form of little nuggets of truth buried in mountains of frantic, wishful obfuscation... <http://www.nationalreview.com/corner/344080/unaffordable-care-act-yuval-levin>

A wild guess about the new Pope

Don John, 13 March 2013

I don't know much about Jorge Cardinal Bergoglio, who today was elected Pope Francis I. But for the past 50 years or so, "Jesuit" has mostly meant "moonbat." He does oppose abortion and gay marriage; but he also has a history of involvement with so-called "social justice." That's ominous, of course. It could mean that he is indeed the antipope that was predicted by the late Father Malachi Martin, to wit: a scandal would lead to a papal resignation, and the new pope would work with leftist politicians towards creation of some kind of "world government."

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Jorge\_Bergoglio

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Malachi\_Martin

UPDATE: As head of the Jesuit order in Argentina, Jorge Bergoglio may have colluded with the torturing, murdering 1976-83 military regime. And even worse, after he became a cardinal in 2001, he blamed capitalism for Argentina's deeply dysfunctional economy:

Willful ignorance of Obama's nature

Don John, 10 March 2013

Max Boot thinks it's "obvious" that no president would use drones to assassinate non-combatant Americans on American soil. And he creates several straw-men to cloud the issue, by citing Lincoln's use of force against the very combatant Confederacy, Eisenhower's use of troops to escort black children to school in Arkansas, and the fact that Jane Fonda wasn't killed for "protesting the Vietnam War." Of course Fonda wasn't merely protesting, but that's as beside-the-point as the rest of Mr. Boot's argument.

The aspect that Boot willfully ignores is the nature of the current president, who thinks he has the right to redistribute the wealth; make the government the arbiter of all health-care issues; force Catholics to buy abortion insurance; cause energy prices to skyrocket; effectively disarm all non-criminals; and a host of other "good ideas" from the faculty lounge.

It's clear that Obama's dictatorial arrogance goes beyond even that of Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt, and Lyndon Johnson. All Senator Paul was asking for was a clear statement from the White House: not of the administration's intent (which would be useless, coming from an arrogant dictator), but of its interpretation of the Constitution on a single, well-defined point of law. The filibuster, and public response to it, forced the Justice Department to concede. That's all.
